

An Amazing Artist Zion Rozier

As a young kid I grew up in Miami, I always remember thinking it was a safe place until I was about 6, I lost one of my friends to Gun Violence. At such a young age this affected me greatly, I felt so lost, I was devastated and had to enroll in therapy at such a young age to deal with it all. During therapy I was encouraged to start creating art and it helped me to remind the happiness in my life. As I grew older it gave me so much peace and a sense of purpose. I use my art to express my gratitude to life through painting and to show others from difficult places or people going through difficult times that there is still a huge load of positivity and good times out there. This is why I wanted to share my artwork with you today.
